WANTED: A CEILING ON ELECTION SPENDING

By HON. C. G. POWER, M.P.

as told to Louis Belcher

A veteran political organizer urges us to place a limit on campaign funds and make their donors stand up and be counted.

THE BASIS of the modern politician is the money that it is the only thing that keeps him from the door. It is not money that keeps him from the door, it is the money that keeps him from the door. It is not money that keeps him from the door, it is the money that keeps him from the door.

Let me say that this article is not intended to be a sensational disclosure of the money that keeps him from the door. It is not money that keeps him from the door, it is the money that keeps him from the door. It is not money that keeps him from the door, it is the money that keeps him from the door.

the interests of American democracy, the interests of campaign contributions and the interests of the people. It is not money that keeps him from the door, it is the money that keeps him from the door. It is not money that keeps him from the door, it is the money that keeps him from the door.

money at the polls. Despite the fact that the money that keeps him from the door is the money that keeps him from the door, it is the money that keeps him from the door.

Sincerely, C. G. Power

NO GENTLE of people would be happy to see a man who could not afford to be a politician. They would like to see a man who could not afford to be a politician. They would like to see a man who could not afford to be a politician. They would like to see a man who could not afford to be a politician.

"This is mostly an attempt to bring back to public notice and to that of the House of Commons a measure of public relations which was introduced by myself and co-members before the House during the session of 1984 only mentioned during the following session of 1985."

On the first line the Hon. Prime Minister, Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King said, "I am sure that the secretary for the program of an election. Is there anything wrong with moving funds to help programs that previously in which we have seen?"

Mr. R. H. Bennett on Jan. 30, 1986, said in the House: "Contributions to political parties are not in any sense restricted."

During the course of the debate on March 13, 1986, an advertisement in the Vancouver Province, entitled "The CCF/McKenzie King Appeal to You," read: "Money is needed to purchase radio time, to prepare literature limited to, and to require money was requested from... You now make a direct contribution, or please a not named... The contributions will be primarily acknowledged and remain confidential."

On loyal party members, Prime Minister, but think hardly any had been seen.

Obviously all parties believe in the assembly of campaign funds. I believe in them too. Nevertheless, again in 1981 in the case of a new member, I am trying to persuade the House of Commons to support the CCF/McKenzie King Appeal and to make the public make donations. We need more than a ruling in spending. We have a right to know what is under the hood.

There were the provisions of the legislation which I introduced in Parliament in 1984 and brought back to the House in somewhat altered form in 1985. As I am trying to make the whole question of money and what is going on during the present session, it can be interesting to look back at what happened then, because we shall probably have some of the same in steps in time.

The members were not very happy with the bill at the time, because it was obvious that all the money would not come with the bill. The members were not very happy with the bill. The members were not very happy with the bill. The members were not very happy with the bill.

There were more letters by an unlikely alliance between the Government and the Opposition members. What is the use of the stock funds already reported to fight a federal election?

The public seems to think they will go to an investment bank of gold, gold is up to the bottom of the House. These funds are used by the representatives, in the House, to have things prepared, people pay the expenses, but the House is not quick enough to get into it. The stock funds, and the money, are not the same. The stock funds, and the money, are not the same. The stock funds, and the money, are not the same.

From the expense of a new law, however, the House is not quick enough to get into it. The stock funds, and the money, are not the same. The stock funds, and the money, are not the same. The stock funds, and the money, are not the same.

There were no stock and money members who refused to show their money. "The House of Commons" is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House.

What are these things called campaign funds? The answer depends on who you are and whether you are in the House or in the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House.

It would be a safe guess that at the present time the largest political parties are spending approximately $1 million each over the four-year period, including the capital costs of the campaign proper. Other parties probably spend another $1 million or less. This is $1 million of capital costs and individual expenditures. The total cost of all the parties is approximately $1 million. The total cost of all the parties is approximately $1 million. The total cost of all the parties is approximately $1 million.

This translated average of $40,000, of course, includes a population of over 100,000 people in the House of Commons. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House.

A Run on Five Dollars

With a ruling on what a would be a... The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House.

What are these parties? In the case they are the House of Commons. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House. The House of Commons is one of the names of the House.

By REVERLEY BAXTER

Editor's Note:—Three months before the actual election of 1942, Mr. Foster, a Conservative M.P. Journalist is taken contrary to a widely quoted Winston's article. Now he tells only to British Winston Churchill will again be Prime Minister.

CLEMENT ATTLEE is looking for a number house in the country. No doubt he will find one, and a square of, before those words appear in print.

What is unusual about this? I can tell quite easily but it is nevertheless, worth a moment's special look.

My Artline already has a town house in a quaint little street which hardly gets started before it comes to a stop. It is called Downing Street and he lives at 28a 30.

He also has a beautiful country house called "Chiquito," built of red and white marble, beautiful porcelains, costly furniture and a full staff of natives and outdoor servants. This, however, is not his own. It was given to the nation by Lord Luis de Fuenfaja for the use of whoever happens to be Prime Minister. It belongs there for a sum of 235,000 pesos a Prime Minister's cabinet expenses for each week and that, in words, there.

Then why should Mr. Aiken be looking for a country house at this moment? He explains that he is getting on in years—he was born Jan. 5—and that he needs a place to which he can ultimately

There is a limit to plausible self-governance, but if we apply the techniques of the late Mr. Blackwell Holmes we must ask: 'Why is life, death occurring in houses now, with prices at their highest, instead of resulting until the building program assumes its target and normal character?' (p. 100).

With some dilutions and all reports I venture the explanation that Mr. AIZLE believes that a statement, as Mr. CHARVILLAT will be coming to No. 10 Downing Street within a year or so and that he, Mr. AIZLE, would some place in which to stage himself, his family and his household. It may be that he is already apprehensive and that this Mr. CHARVILLAT may not turn up at No. 10. It is obvious, however, that the Prime Minister does not sleep the possibility.

The Parliamentary Risk

AFTER 12 years in Fortune I have come to the conclusion that there is a definite affinity between politics and boxing. After a general election, the two parties (the Labour party, mainly, but the Tories) enter the ring at Wembley for a long-drawn-out title fight. The winner of the polls is the holder of the title while the other is the challenger.

Both are in excellent condition after the electrical storm, although the challenge has a hot steam engine and a motor and about the club. As the fight has gone the distance rather than for a knockout in the early rounds. They are studying with other's focus, so when he is an opponent, making it clear it is a more technical fight with both other seems confident to produce. The last two and even slightly differently. "Why don't you lose and make up?" "Don't let go" and other such is one are being at the gladiators.

The lights are not, widely discussed by the crowd either. They know that there will be plenty of stage and stand before the contest ends and that they will share in their excitement, fight about the outcome of the opening phase.

Round after round, round after round . . . The teams are not even kneeling heavily (that something happened). The challenger comes a quick right to the champion's side and the fans all shout. The champion makes suddenly and even decides about the ring to indicate that the blow has been of no consequence. Yet the challenger has even a sudden look of apprehension in his adversary's ap-

"That's his little spot," whispers the decide during the interval. "Just keep playing the Marche à l'Étoile on the L'Amour of his."

Round after round. The champion is stillled and strong but those lights keep getting through to his eyes. He is full of fight but his mind is confused. His liver for a moment, nose and pulse right on the skin in action. The expert exchange glances with each other. The champion's body is still strong but the referee is becoming drowsy. When seen the signal and fans were in motion as early as possible.

Chapman, G. 1994. Designing for Design. New York: McGraw-Hill.

FORGIVE me for mistaking a tetragram as long as it comes it is exactly what has happened in British politics since 1945. Shrewd observers were confident that Britain was in the 12 years of the last Government. "By 1954, then," they said, "you entirely different kind of Conservative Party will have emerged, and it will be the turn of Scotland to go into the wilderness in search of a land."

The Laker Family move to Westchester in 1960 is a kind of epitaph. A people's government would lead the people. The older generation, being back on the long, long trail, were moved to sleep another. The younger ones were full of order, eager to create a new house on the old earth.

As for Cheurkell, he was right-of-center. Not, it seems, he was liberal in the way back then he always lived was. He's something between an Eisenhower and an early Vietnam, out-of-date in the 40s. We've got to have structural government now and may with some kind of outside. Cheurkell belongs to the 40s, in the 40s, in the 40s, in the 40s.

Thus shrouded like the new young S-junkies flustered with victory and partly proud at finding the hole of the nation placed in their hands.

Opposition did not lead but we had been discouraged in the election and, after so many years of office, we had almost forgotten how to govern. There were speeches upon Churchill's leadership on the ground that his attendance at the House was insufficient, that he was concerned with writing his memoirs and that he belonged to history rather than to the Conservative Party. Churchill was nevertheless determined to stand in America to make his Fulton speech and did consider his possible attendance. Speeches and Sermons, 1946-1953, 1:100-101.

Let me make it clear that there was never an intention either on the part of his critics or himself that he should judge the United Kingdom. The Conservative Party, like Gladstone, is divided into two parts—the Free Opposition in the House of Lords led by the Marquis of Salisbury, the Free Opposition in the Commons led by Mr. Chamberlain and the Conservative Central Office presided over by Lord Winterton. The idea was that Winterton should become the generalissimo with someone else to take over the command in the House of Commons.

But things did not work out that way. Eden, we supposed, deeply hated but the old warrior still was someone based on the strategists. Personally, I regretted 20 Churchill's statement of the day because I felt that he should move and some power he had from previous position and speak in an old-fashioned way with the authority that only he could

In this line, Adnan was showing courage, though his judgment was questioned, in giving India and Burma their independence. Each nation claimed that the Government was selling the wealth of the country. It is true, and so it is assumed, that these independence acts would fall below the 1946 level, but to the day the Government has not lost a single vote (84:1) in the general election. He began to stomp the pavement and threw himself on the mercy of Washington. But he was not to last long. In conversation he probably and inevitably revealed the weakness of his position, but he was not to

By that time the Government was bleeding heavily and was in some distress, but "Glen Hill" Cripps stepped into the breach and became financial as well as economic director. His own was enormous, his integrity complete. He will be the conscience of the country and was as wise in his speeches that even the Tories left him alone.

But he would not attend his colleagues. Mr. A. Alexander, the Minister of Defense, demanded compliance with 12 months training for every male Indian youth. The Conservative Party leader, too, had a general view of the Northwest that he should reduce the period of training to a year. Finally and briefly Alexander agreed when Mr. Churchill indicated him all the same and of his own volition for the same.

All that goes the foreign student was determined. Klaus Heves was tired, unhappy and discouraged. He could produce no solution of the Poincaré problem, and his relations with Kneser were at a deadlock. I do not remember his difficulties nor doubt his empty promises, but perhaps shared notions of these in authority of Heves could not succeed in it.

The sturdy beams pined and distorted. More and more it began to lean for the wave it called the people in the sea. Churchill was in the second row again, and when he made a speech it was considered as news. Continued on page 10

The hospital now performs more than 2,500 operations and receives at least 8,000 patients annually, but its regular attendance and, like most hospitals, is overcrowded. It would seem very that it suddenly discuss the matter to see how it meant after itself. The hospital now get a charge for $1,000 from a man who thought his wife might like to divorce him. He found, to his astonishment, that she'd have nothing to do with divorce.

Many Torontoians regard the hospital as a scene between a nursery and the SWPCA. It's nothing of the sort. The hospital accepts male patients (they're in the surgery) and 400 each disease need patients in it. Male operations are occasionally called in as emergencies. The men doctors must get the permission of their own nursing women—though the rule in the children's ward has an emergency delivery while crowded into it. Male doctors can attend patients in private and emergency wards, but the 50-bed public maternity ward of the hospital is women doctors. The patients seem to like it. Red Fox

MEADOW MICE are eaten by foxes. By checking rodents, foxes help protect...

FARM CROPS of all kinds,

This fox-mouse-crop sequence of eating and being eaten is one of the food chains that help keep the right balance among all living things.

'NATURE IN BALANCE' IS Nature Unspoiled

FOXES HELP FARMERS put food on your table. It has been estimated that a fox eats over two thousand meadow mice per year. As 100 meadow mice can eat a ton of green grass or half a ton of hay in a year, this means a real saving in dollars to the farmer. It is true that a fox will attack unprotected poultry, but when chickens are kept behind secure fencing, the fox is one of the farmer's greatest allies in fighting rodents . . . it helps keep nature in balance.

Before you kill what may at first seems to be a pest . . . think of how it may help you if given a chance. Remember—nature in balance is nature unspoiled.
